Flash in the pan

YOU DON'T NEED loads of fancy equipment to cook up an oven-baked feast – a few quality roasting tins should do the trick. It's worth investing in a large pan that's also suitable for use on the hob – check product instructions – to reduce cooking juices when required.

The ideal tin is heavy enough not to warp, but not so heavy that you need help to get it out of the oven. A few lighter pans help when you have several dishes on the go, so perhaps invest in a set. From oven to table, dinner is served!
